

OLORI

BY BAROVIER&TOSO

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

Olori draws its name from the Yoruba word meaning “Queen” — a title that embodies authority and identity, here translated into an essential, instantly recognizable form. Inspired by traditional Nigerian jewelry, the design elevates the neck as a place of belonging and representation. The ornament becomes structure: spirals and overlapping elements create a visual and tactile vibration, poised in perfect balance between density and lightness. The silhouette follows an hourglass structure, with a stable, broadening base and a crown articulated in a rhythmic sequence of superimposed elements that envelop the profile with continuity and grace. Crafted using the opalino technique and enriched with gold leaf, the surface reflects light with depth and warmth. A sequence of satin-finished beads echoes the historic Murano tradition of conterie, seamlessly integrated into the design. Olori maintains a measured equilibrium between cultural memory and contemporary language, asserting a precise and distinctive presence in space.
